You can have more than one best friend.

Just because you have more friends does not mean you don't care about the friends you moved away from.

Do you understand that Drew made friends because he never judged the people he met and accepted their differences.

By embracing and accepting differences you make more friends and are happier.

People are unique and special all over the world.

When you travel or move, will you be kinder and make sure you do not judge but accept other people?

Remember you can be happy wherever you go. People are happy all over the world for different reasons.

Remember everywhere you go around the world is special -- just like the people you meet -- they are all special.
